

The average herd size in Kewaunee County is increasing at a rate of 4-5 cows per year. Many dairy producers are at a crossroads with regard to the decision to modernize their facilities or exit the business.

Although dairy modernization is not for everyone, many producers are interested in learning about options that may result in increased efficiencies and a better quality of life. However, this doesn't mean the only answer is dramatically increasing your herd size or taking on significant debt.

Take this opportunity to hear how UW-Extension Dairy Modernization Team members are assisting dairy producers in developing modernization plans using low-cost alternatives.
